CAMPBELL, FREW & CO. EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

MONDAY MORNING, MARCH 4. THE Thirty-ninth Congress ends today, and the Fortieth Congress will as-semble to-morrow. This is an unusual proceeding and one that has never before occurred, except in extra session, in our national history. Heretofore it has been customary to have an alternate long and short session, and in the regular order of things the session endng to-day would have been the short one, and the next Congress would not are extraordinay times, and the regular him, but also have met until December. But these order of things is so out of joint, that the legislative department of the nation has felt itself called upon to remain at gence has taken place between the of the government. The former has arrogated to itself unusual powers and the suspicion is that unless held in check by the latter, it will undertake the exercise of assumptions hitherto unknown and altogether at variance with the Constitution of the country. In other words the President of the United States is no longer a man to be trusted. He has proved himself utterly recreant, not only to the principles of the great Union party that very fundamental principles of the Government itself. It is believed that he would not hesitate, in an interim of Congress, to employ the powers of his office, including its vast patronage, for the endangerment of the Union cause. He is believed to be so blindly bent on his peculiar policy, and so headstrong as against all restraint, that he would avail himself of a; Congressional recess to foment even outrageou ord. Hence the law-making sacrifice to itself, and certainly for no pecuniary reward whatever, to re-assemble at once, and to hold itself in readiness to promptly meet the President at his own game, whatever it may prove to be. Mr Johnson is a engerous man, and is not to be trusted. He has set up his will against that of the whole country, although professing the utmost deference for the popular verdict. No one can doubt his affiliation with the men of the North and of the South who were in opposition to the Union party during the war. His sympathies are with them to-day, instead of being with those who elected him. He has appointed to office the men who not only opposed and de-nounced his election in the loyal States, but also those in the rebel States who st will is to destroy the Republican party if possible. The leaders of that party have determined be shall not carry his purpose into execution. They refore choose to continue their sesdent to that end. The copperhead press into the hands of their enemies. All we can say is that there is no help for such complaints. Let them rail on. Such is their settled and inevitable programme in any event. Unless we surrender to them there is no avail itself of its opportunity, but, in- gether forgotten of late. stead, to remain malcontent and recusant. Putting on an air of injured invindication of the principles fought for mencing :

in the rebellion. The assembling of the Fortieth Congress, thus promptly, will tend to open the eyes of the Southern people. They will see that their hitherto cherished expectations are vain and delusive; that their friends in the North are pow-erless to reverse the current; that the Union people of the country have not been wearled into an abandonment of their principles; that this contest will proceed to its natural conclusion, and that the conclusion will inevitably be, that if rebels do not accept the favorable they will be obliged to put up with something not so favorable to-morrow. Hence we are not surprised to read that the Virginia Legislature re-assembles, under the call of Gov. Pierpoint, to day, in extra session, in order to discuss, and most likely to accept, the terms held out to them in the late bill passed by Congress. Apparently the members of that body have at last perceived that Congress is in earnest; that there is a grave meaning in what has been declared; that to-day is when some provided powerless to thwart the will of the loyal people of the conatry; and the lowal people of the conatry; and the loyal people of the conatry; and the surprise of the surprise of the data in the conatry in the consent for large of the conatry; the consent of the surprise of the surprise of the data in the loyal people of the call of the surprise of the call of the conatry; the consent of the surprise of the surprise of the surprise

At last the Richmond papers are perseiving that Governor Peirpoint is not only a statesman and an honest and its post and see that "the Republic suf-true man, but that he is also the bes fers no detriment" on account of the and most influential friend that Virgin dereliction or usurpations of any other ia has within her borders. has the following article on the situation:

The General Assembly on yesterday adopted a resolution requesting Governor Peirpoint to convene the Legislature in extra session on Monday next, as well to consider matters of State-concern pending in the Legislature and unfinished, as others that are impending over us but which are under the control and will of the ruling power at Washington. We have not a doubt that Governor Peirpoint will acquiesce in the wishes of the Legislature. He has always shown himself not only practical and judicious, but earnestly desirous to promote the order, security, and welfare of the State. Virginia has not often differed with him; but even when thus differing he has acted consistenty, and with the best intentions towards her. After the fall of the Confederacy he came to Richmond, and immediately went to work with his little Legislature to relieve us of dilemma in which we were placed; and but for his statesmanship, honesty, and humanity, Virginia would have become another Tennessee—a very hell upon earth. Those persons calling themselves loyalists who sought to envelop the State In woe are now his bitterest enemies, making him one of the best abused men of the dex. making him one of the best abused
